How to turn on bose cinema without remote control

3344 A connection may have come loose or may be connected incorrectly. For more info, see Setting up your product. Be sure the power connections to your product are secure both to the AC (mains) outlet and to your product. For more info, see Connecting to power. Our eyes cannot detect the IR (infrared) light produced by your remote but many digital cameras can. Look at the top edge of the remote through a digital camera (i.e. a smartphone camera), then press a button on the remote. If you do not see a flash through the camera viewfinder when a button is pressed, the remote is not sending any signal*. If you do see a flash but the remote is not working, try the other troubleshooting suggestions to help determine if the issue is the remote or something else. *Some smartphones have IR filters on the front and/or rear cameras, which prevents them from seeing this flash. So, if you don't see a flash, try both the front and rear camera, a different camera if available, and any other troubleshooting suggestions. If the outlet is controlled by a wall switch, be sure the switch is on. You can also verify if the outlet works by connecting another electronic device, such as a lamp. If connected to a power strip (or surge protector), try bypassing the power strip and plug the power cord directly to a wall outlet. When the system is connected to power, the green light on the front of the interface module should blink for 10 seconds. If the LED blinks after being connected to power but the system will not turn on, see Remote is intermittent or does not control your Bose product. Much like rebooting a smartphone, your product might need to be reset on occasion to correct minor issues. For more info, see Resetting your product. If the steps provided do not resolve your issue, your remote control may need service. Follow the link for more information on how to service your product. Depending on your product and region, you will be provided a contact number or the ability to setup service online. Use Optical Cable or HDMI-CEC to control your Bose System (SPEAKER/SOUNDBAR): CEC (Consumer Electronic Control) is available on the majority of modern HDMI device/s. If your soundbar or speaker system and additional device (s) (such as a TV, Blu-ray player, cable box, etc.) are connected via HDMI connection, look for HDMI-CEC options in the menus of each device. When such devices' remotes are enabled, they may control the volume, mute, and power of your system. Related article: How to Control TV to WiFi Without Remote Note: Depending on the brand, CEC may be identified to in the system menu by a different name. Procedure Hold on for a second and see how you can set up HDMI-CEC on or off. All you have to do is to go to the Bose control space app and you will see in the upper right corner an option of settings. Check out the settings option. There you will search for the power section. Search for the power section and simply scroll down in the Power section and check out for Advanced CEC and there you will reach an option Advanced CEC. Oh great, you have turned on/off HBMi-CEC. © Try this and this will please you and let you enjoy your favorite shows, videos, and audios. Create Your Own Bose Speaker or Sound bar Remote: If you want to program your remote, no need to worry. Come let's see how it works. You have to go through simple steps as mentioned below: Procedure: Go to your Bose Control Space Remote. Check out the upper right corner, you will find Settings. Reach out the settings option. In settings, area checks and find the area mentioning Universal Remote Area. I suggest you to choose TV for the purpose of programming your remote. To program the system to control additional devices, select Configure (i.e. cable box or Blu-ray player). For connection of the Soundbar Universal Remote to the soundbar, select Advanced. You will see this will ultimately result in pairing a remote control. Here you go... You are done with the programming of your remote controls and it is going to work at it best. Enjoy your amazing experience using this technique. Try your programmed remote and enjoy the experience. Using Remote Of Your TV Yes! Time to get rid of the cluttered coffee table and figure out which remote to use. Let's try another amazing trick that would never fail to please you. Do you know? The amazing thing about this technique is it has nothing to do with the brand of your device e.g. TV that will be connected to your soundbar. So now don't stuff your mind by keeping track of multiple remotes for multiple devices, use one remote for all purposes. Connect multiple devices to one remote and control the audio of all connected devices with one remote. All you have to do is create a connection between your Soundbar or speaker to a device like TV via Optical Cable or HDMI via ARC and you are done. Control all the power functions, say, power on, power off, volume up, volume down, mute, unmute and the list goes on in the connected device and the soundbar. To set up your device say TV's audio output. This will enable you to adjust the volume of your soundbar and connected devices using your remote and enjoy every video and image without worrying about anything. After you've configured the output, you may connect the soundbar or speaker with either a digital optical connection or an HDMI cable. After that, you'll be able to use a single remote to control both your connected TV and soundbar/speaker and do multiple functions say power on, power off, etc. Note: Once you turn off or unplug your TV, your soundbar system will simultaneously be turned off so why not let this another technique please you.
